DISCLAIMS BACKING MORRISON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Hariford, Conn., Feb. 18.—Fears held by school teachers of Connecticut that the state board of education was urging adoption of the so-called Morrison school code bill, now before the committee on education, were declared to be groundless, on behalf of the board, at the legislative hearing in the capitol this afternoon. In effect, what Charles F. Smith, a member of the board, said to the hundreds of teach. Charles F. Smith, a member of the board, said to the hundreds of teachers before him was a disavowal of the code as a measure to be accepted as the right way to reform the town the right way to reform the town school system.

The hall of the house of representatives was filled to capacity, the great majority being educators of the state, and all assembled for discussion beand all assembled for discussion before the education committee of what is termed the Morrison code bill. The bill under discussion was submitted by Senator Heald of Stafferd and is in some degree a modification of the
